Brown, of Mississippi: On the Slavery Question; Delivered in the Senate of the United States, December 29, 1856 The Senate having under consideration the motion of Mr. Rusk to refer so much of the President s message as relates to foreign affairs to the Committee on Foreign Relations - Mr. Brown said: Mr. President, when the President s message came into the Senate, and was read by the Secretary, the first proceeding that followed was the rising of the senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Hale] to make a violent attack on the President and on the sentiments of his message. He based that attack chiefly on the ground that the President had intimated a purpose in certain quarters to attack slavery in the States. This speech of the senator from New Hampshire was quickly followed by speeches of a similar character from the senator from New York, [Mr. Seward, ] and others on that side of the Chamber who sympathize with them. These assaults have fallen here as they will...
