Brand New Book  Print on Demand .From the PREFACE. Job was a type of Humanity, cast forth upon this dust-heap that we call the Earth, there to be taught that the search for an infinite God must be an infinite search. He was not a sceptic; he did not deny God or reject Religion; but he was a heretic, inasmuch as he could not accept the teaching of Religion as final, and, like Jesus, he vindicated the right of all men to seek God in their own way: God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth. The heresy of Job, by the genius of a poet who lived perhaps in the period following the return of the Jews from Babylon (538 B.C.), became one of the grandest epic utterances ever given to the world. Its scope is the relation between God and man; its effect is a vast emancipation-no less than a freeing of the human spirit from thralldom to an idol, the god of a religion, into the glorious liberty of a fearless search for the God of the universe. No one, I think, who has deeply and without prejudice studied the Colloquies between Job and his friends can doubt that his ordeal was nothing less than a temptation to accept an idea of God that he could not honestly accept instead of continuing to seek God for himself. In other words, the --burden laid upon him was to decide whether he would consent to be blessed by the apparent representatives of God - upon earth, or whether he would wrestle with God until be blessed him. That...
