Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Scandinavian Languages; Their Historical, Linguistic, Literary and Scientific Value: Elucidated by Quotations From Eminent American, English, German and French Scholars, Notices of These Languages by H. W, Longfellow His great work, The Soul of Nature, in which he promulgates his grand doctrine of the universe, abundantly repays a careful perusal. Carl Von Linne (Linnaeus) is the polar star in Botany. He was Professor at the University of Sweden, died in 1788, and is the founder of the established system of botany. As Linnaeus is the father of botany, so Berzelius might be called the father of the present system of chemistry. He is one of the greatest ornaments of science. He devoted his whole life sedulously to the promotion and extension of his favorite science, and to him is the world indebted for the discovery of many new elementary principles and valuable chemical combinations now in general use. He filled the chair of Chemistry in the University of Stockholm for forty-two years, and died in 1848. Scheele, Michael Sars, Hansteen, and several others, are men who have distinguished themselves by their labors in the field of science, natural history and astronomy. And now read the following quotations, which we have promised to present. Mr. North Ludlow Beamish says: The national literature of Iceland holds a distinct and eminent position in the literature of Europe. In that remote and cheerless isle * * * * religion and learning took up their tranquil abode, before the south of Europe had yet emerged from the mental darkness, which followed the fall of the Roman Empire. There the unerring memories of the Skalds and Sagamen were the depositories...
