By John H. Wishar Author, journalist and world-traveler; former City Editor of the San Francisco Call-Post; former Eastern Business Manager of the International News Service with headquarters in New York; and at present Editor-in-Chief of The Trestle Board, the great International Masonic Magazine published in San Francisco. THE City Editor of a metropolitan newspaper sits, metaphorically, at a great and all-embracing dictaphone which daily reveals to him the innermost secrets of the community. His wires extend to every stratum of the social structure. He is in touch with the high and the low, the rich and the poor, the cranks and the crooks and the public and private individuals of note. Their misdeeds, their loves and hates, foibles and follies, successes and failures are all grist to his mill. The never-ending tale pours in from every conceivable source and through every imaginable channel of communication. The work of the reporter on his beat is supplemented by the well-meaning friend with an ax to grind; by the society woman actuated by jealousy or hate; by the judge on the bench; by the social tipster who thus swells an attenuated income, and a thousand other types and classes of the genus homo. Naturally, there is small chance of any unusual occurrence escaping the callous attention of the man on the City Desk. So it happened that sandwiched into this endless tale of romance and adventure, of achievement and blasted...
