The National Federation of Women Workers was active in securing the change, and its magazine describes the struggle in its usual picturesque style.1 1 B. L. Hutchins, Women in Modern Industry, p. 295. 1 United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, Monthly Review, August, 1917, p. 123. 2 Women s Industrial News, April, 1916, p. 15. s The Woman Worker, April, 1916, p. 9. The amendment act of August, 1917, gave the Minister of Munitions further power over wages for all workers. He might give any directions regarding pay for all time workers on munitions considered necessary to maintain or increase output and might apply any special wage awards which covered the majority of the employers in any trade to the whole of the trade. No information about any use of these powers to alter women s wages was at hand at the end of November, 1917. Wage Fixing for Woinen on Men s Work In a month the provisions of Circular L2 were made compulsory.2 The directions were on the basis of setting up of the machines being otherwise provided for. They are strictly confined to the war period. Women time workers eighteen and over on men s work were to be paid a pound ($4.80) for a week of the usual hours worked by men in engineering. Rates for piece work and for work ordinarily done by fully skilled men were to be the same as those...
