Excerpt: .the chance of stepping into the licensee s place, but that the bankrupt himself may make the same bargain, and put the money safely into his pocket. The license court may or may not accept the buyer as the bankrupt s successor. That is the buyer s affair, and is not decisive upon the point now being considered. He buys a contingency, and buys it with his eyes open; but in my opinion, the trustee has the contingency to sell, and the bankrupt is bound to execute the instruments necessary to carry out the sale. In re Becker, 98 Fed. Rep. 407. 68. No. While the goodwill of a business may be sold, the bankrupt cannot be prevented from subsequently doing business in his own name and soliciting trade from his former customers. Heimbold vs. Heimbold Co., 53 How. Pr. (N. Y) 453. 69....
